

DOES YOUR HORSE HAVE STOMACH ULCERS?

MVS is hosting a 'gastroscopy day' to promote diagnosis of stomach ulcers.

20 June 2017

Ulcers are only visible by gastroscopy (stomach scope) and the signs can be subtle but impact the health of your horse significantly.

Do any of these signs sound familiar?

Dull hair coat

Behaviour changes

Failure to thrive

Poor appetite

Decreased performance

Intermittent colic

Stomach ulcers are common in athletic horses, but can be variable in severity and location. Gastroscopy of the stomach assists veterinarians, owners and trainers to detect the presence and extent of any gastric ulceration. The high quality images detect the presence and location of ulcers and allow personalised treatment plans specific to your athlete.
